Cognizant's profitability focus may be hurting revenue growth

The company's management says it walked away from several deals that offered lower margins

BY ANSHU JAIN
 Cognizant Technology Solutions Corp.'s focus on improving profitability has also hurt revenue growth, the company has to admit, at least in the short term. The management says it walked away from several deals that offered lower margins.

TCS has managed to double its year-over-year revenue growth from 5.8% in March 2017 to 10% in March 2018. Cognizant's growth has slipped from 10.74% to 9.15% during the same time.

The revenue gap between TCS and Cognizant widened to $1.04 billion in April-June 2018 from $9.06 billion in January-March 2017.

Cognizant has improved its operating margin by 60 basis points while TCS's operating margin slipped by 70 basis points during the time.

"We made a commitment to year that we were going to focus on our business, towards more high-value, high-margin and high-quality margins," says a senior executive. "If there is some work that we do that doesn't present that, we're not going to do it. It is not our business, so we're not going to do it."

For the last time last week, the management acknowledges that Cognizant has had a better revenue growth since March 2017.

"We made a commitment to year that we were going to focus on our business, towards more high-value, high-margin and high-quality margins," says a senior executive. "If there is some work that we do that doesn't present that, we're not going to do it. It is not our business, so we're not going to do it."

"We're being picky about making deals. We're being picky about what we're doing. We're being picky about what we're doing. We're being picky about what we're doing. We're being picky about what we're doing."

The company's revenue growth in the last 15 months.

Funding boom back for start-ups

 And many investors have raised concerns about the raised focus on profitability. Some say the focus on profitability and cost-cutting measures at start-ups has led to a decline in the number of deals. However, some say that the focus on profitability is a sign of maturity. "We're seeing a lot of deals that are raising big rounds and demonstrating good unit economics. So, most growth stage funding is going into building scale rather than proving business models, which was the case in 2014-15," says a venture capitalist. "The market is looking for a more mature start-up ecosystem. It's not just about raising big rounds, it's about demonstrating good unit economics. So, most growth stage funding is going into building scale rather than proving business models, which was the case in 2014-15," says a venture capitalist.

Increasingly, this year is resembling 2014, when a handful of relatively mature start-ups raised huge sums.

The environment is very different from that of 2014-15, says a venture capitalist. "We're seeing a lot of deals that are raising big rounds and demonstrating good unit economics. So, most growth stage funding is going into building scale rather than proving business models, which was the case in 2014-15," says a venture capitalist.

Will telecom golden goose lay an egg?

 The industry executives are optimistic about the telecom sector's future. "We're seeing a lot of deals that are raising big rounds and demonstrating good unit economics. So, most growth stage funding is going into building scale rather than proving business models, which was the case in 2014-15," says a venture capitalist.
